

Does prayer make a noticeable difference?

We are seeking people to help us to search for those who are obviously led and helped by God, as described below. If we can find divinely led people, the benefits would be enormous as they would be able to help, encourage and pray for us. They could teach us the truth so that we could effectively serve God. Then God would hopefully help us, so that there would be fewer disappointments. We would then be able to achieve more successful results and be of greater assistance to others. Those close to God should be able to pray for us so that strongholds that hold us back and prevent us obeying and being close to God could then be broken.

God must be the main focus. However, fellowship, guidance and prayer from godly people is important. The Apostles taught the truth to the lost.

The Bible promises blessings and answered prayer for those who obey God, and curses for those who disobey. Therefore, the people who are truly doing God's will and teaching the truth should receive more help from God than the ungodly, so that the result cannot be explained naturally or by chance. Their lives should not resemble those under the curse, who receive chaos without obvious purpose. The righteous should have obvious help from God in practical ways, such as remembering and comprehending things, making the correct decisions, finding what they need and supernatural healing. They should also have less frustrating problems, such as, inconveniences, accidents and losing things. The righteous should also make fewer mistakes than those not led by God. The Bible still promises trials and persecution for the righteous but, unlike the ungodly, there should be a positive purpose in their lives, as Rom 8:28 states; “. . .all things work together for good to them that love God . . .“ Do you know anyone who is obviously supernaturally led and helped by God in practical ways as described above?

Many people claim that their desirable outcomes were due to prayer, but desirable outcomes naturally happen to the ungodly. Therefore desirable outcomes by themselves are not enough evidence that God is working in people's lives. Evidence should be a greater percentage of desirable outcomes or answered prayers in the lives of those claiming to be led by God, compared to the lives of those who are not truly born again. The Bible indicates that there are many people whom God does not know (Luke 13:27) and that a very small percentage are saved today. It states that the majority are deceived. People imagine that they have a relationship with God and are led by Him when they are not. This is obvious because many are led into error and disagreement when they claim to be led by God. It is in the Devil's interest to deceive people that they are saved when they are not, so that they will not search for and find the truth.

I am seeking the truth and have a website at truechristianity.com which contains scripture references and suppressed truth, vital to know but not currently taught. There are also other websites linked with new ideas and rare information. They include community groups, solutions to help people, inventions and much more.

Sponsors are also needed for similar ads. I am willing to negotiate certain changes to satisfy people who can help with promotion. Please contact me if you can help in the search, or if you can share this information.
